P R E F A C E XVII field manual on this subject (FM 100-5) states that future major battles will likely be conducted within an integrated battlefield. This doctrine envisions the air-land battle to be characterized by deep attacks against follow-on echelons behind the front lines, principally through increased coordination of ground and air op-erations. The overall battlefield will be extended beyond the more traditional front lines and will encompass conventional, elec-tronic, chemical, and possibly nuclear weapons, In viewing this future change in the characteristics of future battles, some ob-servers have raised the important question of whether by adapt-ing military organization and tactics to the projected technology of the battlefield of the future, we run the risk of undermining the sources of social support that have historically sustained soldiers in battle. Those who are most concerned with this possibility appear to be primarily influenced by the two major considerations. One is the low personnel density in the form of relatively small weapons teams scattered widely over the battlefield because of weapon lethality, chemical contamination, and improved communica-tions. The other consideration appears to be an implicit conclu-sion that cohesion that is congruent with Army objectives cannot exist without an undetermined but large number of troops organ-ized into large maneuver elements that interact on a daily, face-to-face basis and thereby provide the social support necessary for cohesion. Others carry the argument further, stating that even if large armies were feasible, American society doesnt have the will to man such an army. Again technology is seen as the...
