This part of the ear is supplied by a branch of the second cervical nerve, and an enlarged gland was found pressing on this nerve. Treatment was applied to the gland causing it to suppurate, relieving the pressure on the nerve and the earache ceased. Here is another case: Suppose a case of pain in the head. It is very important to know whether the pain is in the front of the head or in the back. If in front, the fifth nerve is affected, and the trouble is somewhere in the area of the distribution of that nerve. If it is in the back of the head, the occipital is affected, and the disease is located at the origin of that...
