He clung to Hal, and both lads shed tears, till Hob roughly snatched Piers away and threw him to his aunt, with threats that drew indignant, though useless, interference from Hal, though Simon Bunce was muttering, As lief take one lad as the other! while Dollys angry defence of her nurslings wisdom broke the sadness of the parting. CHAPTER XII. A PRUDENT RECEPTION So doth my heart misgive me in these conflicts, What may befall him to his harm and ours. --SHAKESPEARE. Through the woods the party went to the fortified house of Threlkeld, where the gateway was evidently prepared to resist any passing attack, by stout gates and a little watch-tower. Sir Giles blew a long blast on his bugle-horn, and had to repeat it twice before a porter looked cautiously out at a wicket opening in the heavy door, and demanded Who comes Open, porter, open in the name of King Harry, to the Lords of Clifford and of Peelholm. The porter fell back, observing, Sir, pardon, while I have speech with my master, Sir Lancelot Threlkeld. Some delay and some sounds of conversation were heard, then, on a renewed and impatient blast on Sir Giles horn, Sir Lancelot Threlkeld himself came to the wicket, and his thin anxious voice might be heard demanding, What madness is this The madness is past, soundness is come, responded Sir Giles. King Harry is on his throne, the traitors are fled, and your own fair son comes forth in his proper person to uphold the lawful sovereign; but he would fain first see his lady mother, and take her blessing with him. And by...
